In This Episode

Sarah shares a simple tip today to get our kids reading more! But, just because it's simple (really, it will take you 5 minutes!), doesn't mean it isn't super effective. She'll share how this tip will help make books part of your home culture, delight your kids each week and make the most of the books you already own.

- 10:37 Let the kids speak

“Covers are meant to capture our attention, right? Publishers actually create covers with the intention of making them almost impossible to resist. So, if you want to capture your children’s attention toward books ... my challenge to you right now is to go to a bookshelf, pull a few off the shelf, and find a place that you can display them face out, and see what happens.” - Sarah Mackenzie

Quotes and Questions

* Creating book excitement ...

"I have a hunch if you make it a habit of regularly rotating books that are displayed in a windowsill you might be surprised at how excited your kids are to see what's on display."

Is there a place you can start displaying a few books today?

* Home decor ;)

"Would you rather have a tidy, perfectly tidy space, or would you rather have your kids become engaged with reading? Because as far as I'm concerned books are just a part of the home décor."
